c SOCIETY

It was like the good old days, that wedding of Miss Anna Harrison and Mr. Louis Nelson of Kansas City at the Harrison home last night. It yahs and yahs since there was a real wedding in Topeka with bridesmaids and groomsmen, and music and decorations and a leng tulie vell fastened with orange blossoms. The smart set is getting frightfully unconventional here of late, and most of the brides of the past year have slipped off to church or chapel without so much as a bymarried without pomp or circumstance Most of the fashionable weddings have been surprise parties and in some cases, the brides didn't even give them-selves time to get their trousseaux to gether, much less allow for the usual six months' discussion of their plans and preparations. But the Harrison-Nelson wedding las night revived all the dear old traditions and was an impressive ceremony fol-lowed by a fashionable reception with lowed by a fashlonable reception with no pretty detail missing. The decorations were charming, Easter illies, smilax and ferns predominating. The ceremony took place in the living room where against a wall of palms and ferns and illies with tall marble pillars on either side topped with enormous bougets of illies, a white altar had been improvised. All the rooms were heavily gartand with smilax and adorn the dining room was particularly attractive with a table decorated with white satin ribbons, of the property of the pr particularly attractive with a table decorated with white satin ribbons, white candles, a gorgeous wedding cake and a centerpiece of bridal wreath. The bride was happy and bubbling as a bride should be and looked perfectly charming in a lovely gown of white satin and rose point lace with her long tulle veil, orange blossom coffure wreath, and shower bouquet of valley lilies. Her sister, Miss Mary Harrison, who was her maid of honor, and Mrs. Robert Garver, the matron of honor, wore princease gowns of white embroidered muslin and court veils with wreaths of smilax.
